EXPERIENCE

Treehouse

April 2013 – June 2015

Instructor / Ruby Developer

My first position when I joined the team at Treehouse was as a developer. Tasked with improving our student testing platform by building custom engines for each of our taught languages. I transitioned to a Teaching position and took over the existing PHP Curriculum. During my time as an instructor I split my time between student support, writing tutorials, building new course curriculum, on-set filming, screen casting, and writing tests and code challenges. I hold the highest regard for all of my teammates at Treehouse and revel in watching our students grow.

Canonical LTD

Jan 2012 – April 2013

Python Developer

While at Canonical I worked on a small team that maintained and added new features to all of the consumer facing web products as well as some internals. All content was written in Python with test driven development and continuous integration. Canonical uses a rigorous code review process to ensure only the highest quality code is deployed. I greatly enjoyed working with the team to promote the use of open source software. .

Voce Communication

2010 – Jan 2012

PHP Developer

During my time at Voce I worked with a team that developed websites and web applications for a wide array of clients using WordPress as our platform. We worked on a distributed team developing sites to handle large usage loads. Some of the clients included Disney, ABC, CBS, Bloomberg, ESPN, The Pioneer Woman, and PlayStation Networks. It was a very fun and challenging position with a great team.

Hello! I'm Hampton, a web developer, maker, & teacher based in Orlando, Florida.

There are but two things I love, to make and then teach others to make. No matter if made in meatspace or with ones and zeros I derive the greatest joy from seeing others grow along side of me.
